New Library Web Site

As you may have noticed by now, the Library web site has changed. In addition to the right sidebar listing commonly used links, the dark blue bar beneath the campus tabs (Find a Doctor, etc.) shows the path (“trail of breadcrumbs”) of the page you are on (e.g. Home>> For Health Professionals>> Library>> Interface). You may click any item in the trail to return to that page.

If you type in the URL of an old Library web page, you may see a “Page not found” message. To get to the Library home page from such a screen, click the Education tab. Under For Students, click Library. You will be taken to the new Library home page, which will contain links very similar to the old Library web page.

Thanks to Lori Fregoso and Steven Day for their work on this migration, and thanks to Jim Post for his long-time support of the old Library web site, which he established many years ago.

Confidentiality and Online Resources

Remember when emailing online content to yourself or others directly from various databases or web sites that the publisher/distributor may store and use information that you enter for various purposes. There is sometimes no readily noticeable explanation of protection or use of your information at the point where you provide it. The same principle applies when signing up for email alerts and similar services.

Thank You
