Watson W. Wise and the Library

The original and on-going contribution of Watson and Emma Wise and the Wise Foundation to the Library is featured on page 17 of the April/May issue of Tyler Today magazine. The Wises stepped in at a crucial time just as the biomedical research program was undergoing major development. They provided archives of most of the journals that were needed to support that effort. After Mr. Wise's passing, Mrs. Wise and the Wise foundation continued to support the Library. One of the Library's reading rooms is named after the late Mrs. Wise. Most recently, the Foundation's support has been instrumental in obtaining Library resources for the new residency programs as well as psychology and nursing certification exam review materials.

Tables of Contents in WebVoyage

The Library's WebVoyage catalog contains records of all of the Library's books, whether in print or electronic format. To facilitate keyword searching for books, Library staff have been adding tables of contents to the most recently added book records. This should help users identify specific chapters or sections and to find information that may not be readily evident in the title of a book.

Historical Display

With Hospital Week here, you might want to take a look at the historical display across the hall from the Library. It covers the Camp Fannin days as well as the State institutions that have been located here. The latest addition to the collection of artifacts is a model sailing ship that was built by a German POW at Camp Fannin, one of only three in existence.

New Books

This issue's new books list includes the various nursing certification exam review materials acquired by the Library. It also lists many electronic books provided by UT System, some that are part of large packages and others published by Elsevier that are part of a System-wide evidence-based selection process.
