New Library Resources

The Library continues to develop its information resources. This year UT System has purchased more content in the SAGE Research Methods and SAGE Video databases. These are particularly good for data analysis, background reading on statistical methodologies, and gaining insights on specific statistical methods and software.

In addition, the Library now subscribes to several sections of JoVE (Journal of Visualized Experiments), an online video journal on research protocols and techniques. Several basic biomedical sciences are covered, as well as behavioral and cancer research. JoVE is indexed in MEDLINE, so the articles we have access to will be linked from PubMed. JoVE content is also linked from Google Scholar.

Lastly, UT System has once again purchased substantial e-book content from Elsevier and the American Society of Microbiology.

These resources are being added to the online catalog and other Library systems as quickly as possible.

Training

The Library continues its Library 101 series of training sessions on PubMed, EBSCO databases, and more. Watch Important Stuff Joe Knows for announcements of dates, times, and locations. In the future, video tutorials will also be added and linked from Library web pages and Moodle.

Let Us Hear from You

We welcome your comments and suggestions. They let us know about resources or services that may need to be added. They may also give us the opportunity to clear up misunderstandings.

Thank You

The Library appreciates the assistance and support of the following:
